Says Israel-Arab Strife Must Be Overcome

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dr. Marcus D. Kogel, Commissioner of Hospitals of New York City, and Dr. Harry J. Carman, Dean Emeritus of Columbia College, Columbia University, received honorary degrees at the twenty-first annual commencement exercises of Yeshiva University in New York. Guests numbered 1,000.

One hundred and nineteen academic degrees and diplomas were presented to graduates, who included Mrs. Esther Weiner, of 38 Monroe St., Brooklyn, the first woman in the university's history to receive an academic degree. Mrs. Weiner, assistant head worker at Hamilton House, a settlement house at 72 Market St., received the degree of Bachelor of Science.

Mrs. Roosevelt, delivering the commencement address on "Education for World Peace," stressed the importance of growing in understanding of other peoples' problems. Reminding her audience that she had recently returned from a visit to the Near East and Asia, Mrs. Roosevelt said the bitterness between Israel and the Arab states was "terrible". Yet the logic of the situation, she said, required that the two peoples learn to talk together. Israel, she added, had the managerial skills, while the Arabs had resources that, if developed, could solve Israel's food problem.

Similar need existed, she said, for solving the difficulty between India and Pakistan, and finally, she said, the difficulty between the United States and Soviet Russia must eventually be overcome — "maybe by your generation, or maybe it will take more," according to the [illegible] Times.

[illegible] the exercises. Samuel Levy, former Borough President of Manhattan, chairman of the university's board of trustees, scheduled to deliver an address of welcome, refrained because of the heat. The musical program likewise was eliminated.

Manfred Fulda delivered the English valedictory and Sheldon Goldstein, the Hebrew valedictory. Mr. Fulda is the first student in the institution's history to receive a perfect "A" average throughout his four years of college.

The university's annual $1,000 Mordecai Ben David Award for promotion and enhancement among American Jews of abiding loyalty to the United States was presented to Chaplain Oscar Mr[illegible] Chaplaincy School, Fort Slocum, N. Y. Rabbi Lifshutz served with the 8th Army in Korea until 1950, receiving the Bronze Star Medal for heroic service. Prior to that he was Jewish adviser to Gen. Mark W. Clark in Europe.

Israel Seeks To Expand Trade With Russia

One marked improvement in the Soviet standard of living during the last four years was noted by Schmuel Elyashiv, Israel Minister to Moscow, who visited Tel Aviv. The diplomat told a meeting of the Commercial and Industrial Club that in 1949 foreigners in Moscow had been conspicuous by their dress because most Muscovites wore old uniforms. Today it is not easy to distinguish between foreigners and Russians except for the quality and taste of the clothes, Mr. Elyashiv said, reports the New York Times.

There is a bigger variety of food on the market at lower prices, he added. The wage level held, however. Mr. Elyashiv said books were cheaper, but consumer goods prices were unchanged. "Perhaps their industry is occupied with other things," he said.

The Minister said there were prospects of expanding Israel's trade relations with Russia. This year Israel shipped oranges and bananas to Russia. "They would have bought more if we were able to supply the goods," he said. There is "no change" in the Kremlin's policy toward Israel, which in the past has been friendly, the envoy said.

A.J.C. Head Warns On German Trends

Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the American Jewish Congress, urged in a statement submitted to the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee: the banning of the military from any significant role in the political life of Germany; the prohibition of veterans groups and of glorification of the German military tradition; an intensive campaign against the spirit of racial superiority and anti-Semitism through education, the enactment of necessary legislation and appropriate administrative measure; ending the agitation for further modification of the sentences of war criminals and the prohibition of neo-Nazi movements or meetings. He also declared that Germany, as a pre-condition for acceptance in the world community, must provide compensation for the Jewish victims of Nazi persecution.

The American Jewish Congress president declared: "For the Jewish people, the consideration of a partnership between the free nations of the world and the Government of Western Germany is an occasion on which we are bound to search our minds, our hearts and our souls. This is a time when we cannot disentangle our memories from our hopes, our logic from our emotions." Dr. Goldstein criticized the results of the Allied occupation program in Germany. "At the present time," he said, "there is a considerable gap between our professed goals in Germany and our actual accomplishments. We must make certain beyond peradventure of doubt that Western Germany will serve democratic and freedom-loving ends and not the purposes [illegible] of a resurgent nation [illegible] of the sentences of war criminals, the abandonment of the denazification program, the alarming rise of neo-Nazi and hyper-nationalist veterans organizations, the return to high government positions of persons "whose past records constitute a catalogue of Nazi and pro-Hitler activities," and the increase of latent and open anti-Semitism.

"We are not naive about the facts of contemporary politics," Dr. Goldstein declared. "We harbor no illusions about developments in East Germany which follow the pattern already established in every other Soviet satellite. We give full heed to the official spokesmen who emphasize that the arming of West Germany is necessary in order to deter the Soviet Union from aggressive intentions. Despite these considerations, painful memory of the past and a sober appraisal of significant trends within Germany impel us once again to caution that this convention represents a serious gamble."

Among the understandings which the American Jewish Congress statement recommended as necessary were: The obligation of the West German Government to oppose resurging militarism; to combat anti-Semitism; to combat a program of education as to the character and nature of the crimes committed by the Nazi regime, to discourage any further agitation for the mitigation of sentences of war criminals imposed by allied tribunals and to prosecute guilty persons not yet brought to justice; to ban neo-Nazi movements and organizations; to enact measures to enable Israel and Jewish resettlement organizations to absorb and resettle the Jewish victims of Nazism and to be compensated for responsibilities already assumed for rescue and rehabilitation.

Dr. Goldstein urged that provision for a mixed board, to review and to modify sentences imposed on war criminals, be set aside as likely to result in further modifications so extensive as wholly to destroy the significance of the principles established at Nuremberg, that those responsible for crimes against humanity should be held accountable for their deeds and punished."

Believe Attacks In Tunis Part Of Dispute

Clashes between Arab and Jew in Tunisia, where their relations have been notably good when they were notably bad elsewhere in the Moslem world, have provoked mutual recriminations at Paris between spokesmen for Tunisian nationalists and French administrators of the country.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the series of attacks on Jewish-owned stores begun by teen-age Arabs in Tunis, in which an 18-year-old Jewish youth was killed, had been incited by extremists of the Neo-Destour Nationalist party to refocus Tunisian and world interest on their dispute with the French over home rule demands, according to the New York Times.

A Paris spokesman for the Neo-Destour party, however, ridiculed this charge and said that there was a long record of good relations between the Arabs and Jews in Tunisia to support his denial. He called on all Tunisians "without distinction of class or religion to remain vigilant and united to repulse criminal maneuvers of division and diversion coming from the colonialist authorities or from their agents provocateurs."

The leader of the Jewish community of Tunis which includes more than half of the protectorate's 100,000 Jews called the clashes dangerous but added that he was convinced they were the work of "irresponsible elements." The representative of a United States Jewish agency in Tunis, himself a United States citizen, expressed the hope that the incidents were isolated phenomena without deep racial significance and that they would end with the end of the Moslem holiday of Ramadan [illegible] the Moslem [illegible] invitation to [illegible] youths.

Neutral observers who have studied Tunisian affairs at first hand were agreed that Arab-Jewish clashes were generally "out of character." When the Arab-Jewish warfare in Palestine put members of the two communities throughout the Moslem world in a state of overt and often violent hostility Tunisia remained singularly free from incidents.

The late Moncef Bey, predecessor of the present ruler, refused to honor anti-Semitic laws decreed by the Vichy Government of the late Marshal Henri-Philippe Petain during World War II and declared that all Tunisians—Arab and Jew alike—were his "children."

In general, Jews have sought to remain unobtrusive in the current dispute between the Nationalists and the French. However, the Neo-Destour party itself claims many Jewish adherents and at least two of them—Victor Barnes and Andre Baruch—were prominent enough to be arrested and interned by the French among the more than 1,500 Nationalist leaders.

Another index of the normal state of relations is the fact that there has been very little Jewish migration from Tunisia to Israel. The French contend that only their presence guarantees Jewish security. Professions of friendship for the Jews by Nationalist leaders even if sincere, the French spokesman assert, could not check the basic anti-Semitism of the Arab rank and file without French support.

This view is shared privately by many Tunisian Jews, says the New York Times. There are those who assert that a decisive weakening of French control would lead to a mass Jewish exodus from Tunisia similar to that from Libya when the country's status as an independent nation was decreed

Restates Role Of Jew Outside Of Israel

Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion expressed satisfaction that the Zionist Organization of America at its convention in New York had cleared up the misunderstanding about the right of foreign Zionists to participate in the shaping of Israel's policies. A resolution adopted by the convention said, in part, that the Zionist Organization of America "takes no part in the political life of the State of Israel, which is the exclusive function of its citizens."

In a message to Rabbi Irving Miller congratulating him on his election as president of the Zionist Organization of America, Mr. Ben-Gurion said:

"In the Zionist movement, as in any other democratic force, differences of opinion are inevitable and legitimate. Every Jew, wherever he may be, has the right to criticize what is being done in Israel and to express his views on all problems affecting the state. But only he who lives here and so identifies himself personally with the fate of the state is in a position to shape directly its life and policies by participating in the elections of our parliamentary representatives and our Government."

"I am very happy to note that the misunderstanding which formerly prevailed in this respect among the ranks of the Zionist Organization of America was at last cleared up at your last convention."

This "misunderstanding" had in the past three years erupted into some sharp attacks by Mr. Ben-Gurion against United States Zionist leaders, culminating in the charge that they were "bankrupt."

In this message, the Prime Minister called for cooperation between the Zionist Organization of America and all other sections of the Zionist movement, observing that "the divisions that exist between them are utterly insignificant as compared with what unites them."

He described the essential demands of the hour as being "to promote the unity of the Jewish people and American Jewry, to foster Hebrew education, strengthen the pioneering spirit among Jewish youth, widen and intensify the personal contact of students and others with the new life in Israel."

Mrs. L. Corobow, McLynn Avenue, was hostess at a farewell tea in honour of Mrs. A. Bauer, Dollard Avenue, who is leaving to make her home in New York. Present were: Mesdames A. Albin, J. Blanshay, J. Deitcher, L. Deitcher, I. Lieff, A. Malina, S. Saltzman, G Solomon, W. Scheeter, M. Cohen, I. Lerner, and E. Goldberger. A presentation was made.

Marvin Philip Singer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Singer, Roslyn Avenue, was called to the Reading of the Law, at Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue. He is the brother of Carl and Rena; grandson of Mrs. M. Schwartz, Roslyn Avenue, and the late M. Schwartz; and of Mr. and Mrs. M. Singer, Esplanade Avenue. At a Kiddush and luncheon two hundred and thirty guests were present. Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat spoke; and Marvin Philip said Kiddush. Seated at the head table with the bar-mitzvah and his brother, Carl, were: Sidney and Edward Perlman, Roslyn Avenue; Peter Cohn, Michel Bibaud Avenue, cousin of the bar-mitzvah; Allan Solomon, Murray Hill Avenue; Roger Baker, Grosvenor Avenue; Allan Israel, Mira Road; Michael Malus, Lacombe Avenue, Stephen Levy, Aberdeen Avenue; Lyon Gould, Argyle Avenue; Ronald Seltzer, Circle Road; Steven Nutik, Clarke Avenue; Paul Rubin, Cedar Crescent; Morris Macklin, Roslyn Avenue; Lawrence Schwartz, Van Horne Avenue, cousin of the bar-mitzvah; Mitchell Cohn, Roslyn Avenue; William Pencer, Cedar Crescent; and David Auerbach, Queen Mary Road. Out-of-town guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. A. Calp, of St. John, N. B., and Mrs. J. Singer, of New York. The tables held floral centrepieces of roses; and there were standards of white gladioli, pennies, and roses for the receiving line.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Shefler, Lacombe Avenue, were at home on two successive days in celebration of the approaching marriage of Miss Joan Weinberger, daughter of Mrs. Jessie Weinberger, and the late Alexander Weinberger, of Forest Hills, Long Island, N. Y., to their son, David Norman Shefler, on July 20, at Forest Hills Inn, at Forest Hills. One hundred and fifty guests were received on the first day; and on the following day there was a luncheon with about twenty-five guests, members of the immediate family; and about eighty guests were received that afternoon. On the first evening, Mrs. Shefler wore a brown dotted Swiss organza cocktail dress, with matching slippers; and Mrs. Weinberger, a black antique taffeta cocktail dress, with black satin ankle-strap shoes. Miss Weinberger was in a white chiffon dress, designed with halter-neckline, and full skirt, with all-over trimming of black coin dots, and worn over a white satin slip, with black pumps. For the second occasion, Mrs. Shefler wore a navy-blue crepe dress, with navy-blue Chantilly lace trimming, and had navy-blue satin slippers; and Mrs. Weinberger was in a navy-blue crepe dress, with self-trimming, and had navy-blue shoes. Miss Weinberger wore a dress of maize-yellow chiffon, with a white eyelet-embroidered redingote; and had white, flower-trimmed shoes. Assisting in the dining-room were Mrs. H. Shefler, Queen Mary Road, aunt of the groom-elect; and Mesdames A. Fleming, Grosvenor Avenue; J. Weigensberg, Brodeur Avenue; G. Selig, Grovehill Place; T. Wilansky, Glencairn Road; N. Auerbach, Lacombe Avenue; George Etcovitch, Lacombe Avenue; and A. Kasner, Lacombe Avenue. The table was decorated with a double-heart-shaped cake, trimmed with white and pink roses, which was brought from New York by Mrs. Weinberger, and there were pink and white candles tied with pink satin bows. Throughout the house, there were bouquets of white and pink peonies and pink roses. Here for the occasion, were: Miss Rita Weinberger, sister of the bride-elect, of Forest Hills; Mrs. Lillian Weinberger, aunt of the bride-elect, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Harold Flaxman, uncle of the bride-elect, of New York; and Mr. and Mrs. William Matthews, of Cleveland, Ohio, uncle and aunt of the groom-elect. Miss Weinberger has a B.A. degree from Queen's College, in New York; and this year received an M.A. degree from Radcliffe College, in the management training program. Mr. Shefler has a B.A. degree from Denver University, at Denver, Colorado; and received his Master of Business Administration degree at Harvard University. In April, Mrs. Weinberger was at home to about one hundred guests at a party in New York, celebrating the engagement.

MARRIAGES

FINE-BARNETT

The marriage of Beverley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Barnett, 1035 Eglinton Avenue West, to Irving Fine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Fine, 210 Beatrice Street, took place on Sunday, May 25, at Beth Sholom Synagogue, at five o'clock, with Rabbi David Monson officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a strapless gown of white lace and nylon net tulle over pink, with bouffant skirt, under a full-length, long-sleeved redingote. Her fingertip tulle illusion veil was caught to a matching lace headpiece, and she carried a white orchid on a Bible adorned with pink streamers and carnations. Mrs. Louis Silverberg, the bride-elect's sister, was matron of honour in a lavender strapless chiffon gown, with matching stole, and open-crowned Juliet cap; and she carried a cascade of lavender carnations and spring flowers. Miss Gertrude Fine, the groom-elect's sister, was maid of honour, wearing an ankle-length, strapless lace and net gown, with matching jacket, and princess crown; and carried yellow carnations and spring flowers. The bridesmaids, were dressed alike in ankle-length, strapless gowns of nylon net and lace, with matching, large puffed-sleeved jackets. They were: Misses Lila Shiner, in blue; Esther Feldman, in pink; Mrs. I. Siderson, in green; Mrs. J. Wagner, in yellow, and Mrs. M. Hock, in pink. Their matching veils were tied in the back with bows, and they carried nosegays of blending flowers. Linda Wayne was flower girl, in a pale blue taffeta gown, with matching poke bonnet, and she caried a nosegay of matching flowers. Howard Golden was best man. The ushers were: Douglas Rober, Bernard Davis, Martin Offman, Louis Silverberg, and Morris Hock. Dennis Silverberg was ring-bearer, in a white jacket and dark trousers. The canopy was adorned with various spring flowers. Mrs. Barnett wore a cinnamon-coloured nylon gown, trimmed in white brocaded flowers, with matching Juliet cap, having pearl trimming; and corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Fine was in a mauve lace gown, with matching headpiece, and corsage of yellow roses. For the trip to New York, and Atlantic City, N. J., the bride left in a beige tropical suit, with yellow and beige accessories, and white orchid corsage. The couple are residing at 1035 Eglinton Avenue West. Mrs. H. Kadsa, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. J. Sheridan, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Sheridan, of Chicago, Ill., were wedding guests.

Professor Arieh Leo Olitzki, chief bacteriologist at the Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School in Jerusalem, has been awarded the Henrietta Szold Prize in medicine and hygiene of Tel Aviv for researches on the source of the bacteria polluting Jerusalem's cisterns, and on the chemical processes for the purification of the water while the city was under siege during the War of Independence in 1948. His work helped to keep the city supplied with pure water after the pipeline from the coastal plain had been cut by the enemy.

Israel Cuts Fuel In Transport

The registration of private automobiles, taxis and trucks began as the first steps were taken to implement the recent Cabinet decision to cut down on fuel consumption. Under the new regulations, cars, taxis and trucks will be immobilized two days per week, while bus service in and between cities will be drastically reduced. The step was initiated as a result of a threatened shortage of fuel and the need to conserve existing supplies. The two-day immobilization for automobiles commenced on June 25, and the restrictions on bus and truck service will begin July 10.

Automobile and truck owners will have to keep their vehicles of the roads on Saturday plus any one other day of their choosing. Taxi drivers will be allowed to select the two days they prefer to remain idle, although it appears that they will select Friday and Saturday as their days of option. The Histadrut Ovdim (Israel Federation of Labor) is pressing to have the restrictions on truck and taxi travel limited to only one day, but it is doubtful whether the request will be granted. Transportation accounts for about twenty-five percent of the fuel consumption of Israel.

The restrictions will not affect Foreign legations, emergency services, and certain Government vehicles. Farm vehicles regarded as necessary to bringing in the harvest will also not be affected. In an effort to encourage maximum travel by rail, inter-city bus and taxi service has been forbidden for a period of one hour preceding the departure of trains from the main cities. The number of daily bus trips between Jerusalem, Tel-Aviv and Haifa has been reduced from 105 to 70. Late movie and theatre performances have been advanced one hour in order to enable the public to secure bus transportation before 11:00 p.m., when all service ceases.

To solve the problem of traffic congestion caused by the 6,000 cars, five thousand trucks and one thousand buses which pass Tel-Aviv daily, the Municipality has decided to build three large subterranean parking lots in the city. In addition, a large area of twenty five dunams is to be set aside for surface parking. In an effort to remove the bottleneck which exists because of the slow passage of traffic, through the city streets, 145 streets will be changed into one-way throughfares. The municipality has recommended that a central taxi terminal be erected on the site of the old railway terminal to clear the streets of hundreds of taxis now holding up traffic. Two additional bus terminals are to be constructed in the northern part of Tel-Aviv and in Jaffa to ease the load on the present terminal which caters to over a quarter of a million travellers each day. Bus service will be augmented by the pressing service of a number of [illegible] recently arrived from France.

A.J.C. Head Hails Voiding Of Ban On Movie

The recent unanimous decision of the United States Supreme Court voiding the New York State Board of Regents ban on the motion picture "The Miracle," was hailed as a "vindication of the position taken by the American Jewish Congress in its brief to the Court in that significant case," in a statement issued by Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the AJCongress. The Congress had joined with the American Civil Liberties Union in a joint brief to the Supreme Court, arguing that censorship of films on theological grounds violates the constitutional guarantee of religious liberty and separation of church and state. The American Jewish Congress was the only Jewish agency to submit a brief to the Supreme Court in this case, as well as to the courts of New York State during the earlier stages of the case.

"The issue before the Court in this case," Dr. Goldstein declared, "was basically the conflict of two philosophies of the relationship between church and state. One tradition holds that it is the business of the secular government to censor opinions or views deemed heretical by the church. This tradition led to heresy trials, to the Inquisition, to the persecution of dissenters by almost all sects at one time or another.

"The other philosophy is that of Thomas Jefferson, who said that error alone needs the coercive arm of government, truth can stand by itself. It is the approach of James Madison, who said that religion and government must forever remain independent. It is the approach of the American Constitution, which requires the wall between church and state to remain high and impregnable.

"It is this latter philosophy which was the basis of the Supreme Court decision," Dr. Goldstein declared. "We are deeply gratified to note that the Supreme Court has once ruled that religious doctrines can stand on their own, and do not require the coercive arm of the Government to prevent what individual sectarian groups may consider sacrilegious."

A new film version of "The Jazz Singer," first motion picture to have a spoken line of dialogue, will be made by Warner Brothers this summer with Danny Thomas playing the role originally created by Al Jolson, and Doris Day in the role played by May McAvoy. Originally made by Warner Brothers in 1927 as an experiment in the use of the Vitaphone, "The Jazz Singer" turned out to be a box office gold mine that made more than $2,000,000 for the firm and set it on its feet financially. The picture also made a movie star of Jolson, and was largely responsible for starting silent pictures toward the scrap heap. The new version will include only one song from the original, the Hebrew chant "Kol Nidre."

The Hebrew University will double its student population in the departments of agriculture, medicine and natural science, it was announced by the University Rector, Professor Moshe Schwabe. The move will increase the total student body from 2,500 to 4,000. The plan to increase the student body by 1,500 students will extend over a two-year period.

The 'British Dental Journal' of March 15 carries an advertisement for the post of a Senior Dental Technician in the Kuwait (Persian Gulf) State Dental Service. It stipulates among other things that applicants "must learn Arabic, be British-born and non-Jewish".

Saichel And Uncle Pincus

BY MARTIN S. DWORKIN

To Uncle Pincus, his son Hiram's studies in biology were so much esoteric nonsense. Not that Pincus despised learning. On the contrary, he thought very highly of it in its place, and was proud of his ambition to provide all his children with a college education. But learning somehow never aplied to him—except rarely, when some naked fact or bald statistic could be fished out of the limitless ocean of things he did not know, to corroborate a vagrant opinion.

"What has this to do with LIFE?" he would ask, whenever some one of his offspring chilled his inspired conjecturings by offering 'information.' To be adequate for LIFE, an idea, judgment, or attitude had to spring out, full-born and self-justified, from saichel.

Uncle Pincus left speculations as to why the world turned as it did to the rabbis—and to his neighbour Gumbiner, whom he held up as the prize example of the fact that it is possible to be a 'regular bucker' and still remain a schlemiel. The ultimate irrelevance of learning with respect to LIFE appeared to be perfectly exemplified in the case of Gumbiner—he of the endless and needless references to unknown and unimportant people: 'Aristotle,' 'Kant,' and a medieval galuch named 'Aquinas,' who was outrageously represented as 'the goyische Maimonides.'

How the world turned was a different story. This was not a matter of knowledge, but of saichel, which is something else altogether. Did God know how to run the world? Did he have to learn it in school, like Hiram studying his biology? God had saichel; more — God was saichel itself, absolute and unalloyed — a characterization that inevitably set Gumbiner to muttering about the problems of 'pure essence' and 'pure being,' objections that Uncle Pincus disdainfully flicked from his mind like so much lint from a coat in the shop.

Thus, to Uncle Pincus, the most conclusive argument of all was that ad hominem. "Look, Gumbiner," he would say, "don't be such a nahr all of your life. If you had saichel you wouldn't have to read all those books." Meaning, of course, that Gumbiner, for all his 'essences' and 'existences,' was just another tailor, like Pincus himself—and not so good a one, at that. Gumbiner, it would appear, had to study constantly and frantically in order to exist at all in the world through which Uncle Pincus floated grandly, by means of saichel alone.

But even saichel is not impervious to certain slings and arrows, and it was Uncle Pincus' outrageous fortune that his Hiram took up biology in school—and brought it home For a while, it looked as if saichel was going to lose out, that 'facts'—book learning—in a horrid imposture, were going to successfully usurp not only the seat of governance in the household, but the throne of the world as well.

It was the not-so-secret disappointment of Uncle Pincus that none of his children bore a resemblance to anyone on his side of the family. This was so obvious to any observer that it could not be denied. Not that his children were not handsome in their way; woe betide the foolish one who stated or implied that! After all, was not the one they took after the woman he had married? But they could have been so much more beautiful! It was simply a misfortune; and all that saichel could avail was to enable him to bear so great an unglück as he did. He sighed, and shook his head knowingly and resignedly.

Max, the eldest, who was already out in the world, an evening college student who worked as an apprentice in the shop, grinned and shrugged his shoulders. LIFE had been so kind as palpably to demonstrate that he had no need to apologize for his looks. And Hiram didn't care how he looked—and this was the truth, as every one was interminably telling him. But Jeanie had just discovered her spindly legs, and her father's sighs for the beauty that had been lost made her feel that she had been terribly cheated. At these times, and especially when the pains of her maturing wracked her frail body, Jeanie resented her mother, and in her fantasies became the beauteous daughter her father deserved.

Like most of what her husband said, these reminders that her children had been blighted at their births had small effect upon Aunt Rose. Once, it is true, he had been so handsome in her eyes that every word he uttered touched yet one more string inside her soul, one never struck before, vibrating her body to its pitch like the double-strings of a viole d'amore. Now, body and spirit were somewhat differently attuned. Her love for her husband, for one thing, had little to do any longer with what he said—or what he did, for the matter. In fact, the less she listened, the more free was her affection for him from the necessity of comprehending what he was saying.

Not that Aunt Rose ever consciously expressed it — to herself or anyone else—but it seemed to be her philosophy of life that understanding other people only leads to trouble. In her house, for example, there was nothing to understand. Milchigs had to be kept separate from fleischigs, meals had to be ready on time, the children sent off to school, and everyone dressed as neatly and cleanly as possible—so people couldn't point her out in the street as a negligent housewife. It would have shocked Uncle Pincus, the sophisticate, to know how near Aunt Rose's unexpressed philosophy came to his own.

Hiram believed with William James that there is no good in being educated, if you do not show it. His whole world was steadily subjected to the measure of what he learned, as he learned it. What was lost in breadth of perspective was more than made up in relentless enthusiasm. No positivist was more positive that what is fact today is truth today —and no mistake. The spectrum of time, as it was visible to him, appeared to squeeze tomorrow and yesterday to narrow bands, vaguely discernible at best, on the peripheries of a vast today. Now is when there is dispute, and now is when it can be settled—for now.

observing that Hiram first unloosed the storm that shook the power of saichel to its cosmic foundations.

It was unusual for him to be so silent during supper. Usually, he could be counted on to leaven the family repast with some new witticism, mysteriously acquired or more mysteriously invented. "This stuff'd gag a maggot," he would say about Aunt Rose's delicious chicken soup, without meaning a word, but willing to defend his aphorism to the last—while the last of the soup went the way of the first. It was this latter fact that most impressed Aunt Rose, and taught her to properly locate her son's attempts at humour as unworthy of notice of concern. For Uncle Pincus, however, more than culinary skill was at stake.

"So, and for this I send you to high school, so you should talk like a gangster! oisgehaderet kinder! And this is how my children grow up — to become truck-drivers?" In Uncle Pincus' lexicon of horror and disparagement, no calling was so lowly and debased as that of truck-driver. Nor was he hampered in the full savour of his opinion by first-hand knowledge of any person in that profession, living or dead.

This time, Hiram was strangely —and ominously—silent, a fact disturbing in itself, since the family, like the behaviourists' salmon, had become habituated to breasting the currents of his exuberances, before reaching the peaceful waters beyond. Aunt Rose frankly, and uncle Pincus furtively, examined their offspring for signs of some incipient illness and were both disconcerted to find themselves objects of intense scrutiny on his part. There was no doubt about it: Hiram seemed in perfect health—and in full command of whatever purpose he meant to serve by this unusual behaviour.

Patience cannot be counted among Uncle Pincus' salient virtues, but he bore Hiram's stares with a show of unconcern—and with much inner unease. Knowing his son's unpredictability—which is to say that he knew very little of him — he dreaded what was surely forthcoming, whatever it was to be. It was Jeanie who broke first before what she inevitably interpreted as an invasion of her personhood.

"Well, what are you staring at?" she shrilled. "Poppa, tell him to stop it," which was almost the last thing Uncle Pincus wanted to hear at that point.

In a final, unconscious attempt to salvage whatever it was that was going to feel the impact of Hiram's new folly, Uncle Pincus looked up from his plate, and stared inquiringly into his son's stare. The joust was soon over, and the vanquished attempted to betake himself to the friendly confines of his pavilion. "Eat up like a nice boy, Hiram, and go and finish your homework."

A sensational rise in provincial revenue since 1944 is the best index of Quebec's economic prosperity. With only 13 p.c. of the tax dollar the Quebec Government was able to execute projects which are an asset to the country.

Think of all the Provincial Government would have done had it received a just and equitable share of the tax dollar. In 8 years' administration the National Union produced 8 surpluses. In this as in all other respects Duplessis led the way.

Jewish History And The Modern Jew

BY DR. SOLOMON GRAYZEL, OF NEW YORK, EDITOR OF THE JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The Jews have lived through four thousand years. Before the dawn of the Western world, the Jews were here. They began their career in antiquity, when there flourished nations of whom nothing but a vague memory survives. The Jewish people lived and labored when Assyrians and Babylonians were terrorizing their neighbors, and Egyptian priests were uttering strange incantations. The Jews are alive today, when new nations bestride the world. If the experiences of one man's life are interesting, how much more thrilling and significant is the adventurous journey and miraculous life of an entire people!

The history of the Jews is not the story of an isolated adventure or of a life lived far away from the crowded highways of civilization. On the contrary, hardly an important event happened in the history of the world but that the Jews played some part in it. Sometimes the event affected them after it happened; sometimes they themselves helped bring the event about; but always they were there — anxious and eternal participants in humanity's struggles and progress. A knowledge of Jewish history, therefore, requires acquaintance with the momentous events in the history of many nations. This is why Jewish history is many times more important than one might suppose, judging merely from the fact that the Jews are numerically a small group. By observing the Jews, one can view the entire pageant of mankind's pilgrimage through the ages. Tragedy and almost miraculous escapes from extinction, triumphs over tremendous difficulties, great achievements in the world of culture and religion, and devotion to the welfare of humanity are characteristics of the Jewish story.

Jewish history presents a challenge to the modern Jew. The heroes of the Jewish past — thinkers, teachers and leaders — lived their lives and made their sacrifices in order that their descendants might have a fund of wisdom for inspiration and practical living. Their life and effort were wasted unless they lead to action on our part, to defend what we received from the past and, if possible, to enrich it further. In other words, Jewish history tells how generation after generation of our people grappled with problems and overcame difficulties for the sake of things they considered sacred. The story is worth telling because it may help the present generation to see its problems in better perspective and to encourage its search for helpful solutions to these problems.

A knowledge of history does not of itself provide solutions for current problems, but it is useful in offering encouragement and suggestions. The circumstances which challenge Jewish life today are not at all the same as those which challenged it in the days of the Maccabees or when the Roman Empire was at the height of its power, or upon any of the other numerous occasions when the fate of the Jews was in the balance. The problem of Jewish defense against persecution is a good illustration of how methods change in accordance with conditions.

There were times when the Jews were compelled to take up the sword, and other times when they took up the pen in defense of their right to live as Jews. Sometimes a generation won its battle by proclaiming itself ready to be slaughtered; at other times it was compelled to use a plea or a bribe. Can the Jews use these methods today? To answer this question, it is necessary to study the conditions of the past struggles and compare them with present conditions. One must know the strength and weakness of the Jewish spirit then and now. Jewish history thus becomes an essential preparation for our struggle for survival.

Similarly with other problems facing the Jewish group: the problem of self-regulation, that is, to what extent Jewish communal life is possible in the free environment of the United States; the problem of Jewish culture and the possibility of its further development in the Diaspora; the problems connected with modern efforts to rebuild Palestine as a Jewish Homeland; and the problems connected with strengthening Jewish religious life. All of these problems are complex and interrelated. Thought, effort and sacrifice are needed for their solution; but knowledge of the past is also necessary. For none of these problems is altogether new in Jewish life; and Jewish history, which is really recorded Jewish experience, can be very helpful. The Jews are an old people and the wisdom they have acquired through their long life ought not to be neglected or wasted.

In the modern period, the phenomenal growth of the United States of America has been of the utmost importance. When the thirteen colonies established themselves as a new nation "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal," they began an experiment in human freedom which has served as proof that all races and religions can adjust themselves to one another and live at peace. The rise of the Jewish community in the United States is a glorious epic within the larger story of America. Unfortunately, some prejudices of the old world have been imported also into the new. As ever, the Jews form the strategic point around which is being fought the battle for and against the broad spirit of Americanism. If we make certain that Americanism triumphs, the next generation of Jews will have an opportunity to face with wisdom and courage its problem of adjustment to the expanding life in this land of the free.

RESTATES ROLE

Benjamin G. Browdy, outgoing president of the Zionist Organization of America, denied in New York that he had been induced by Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion of Israel to renounce last year's "identification" resolution of the organization. This resolution pledged "fraternal relations" with the General Zionists in Israel. Dr. Peretz Bernstein, leader of the General Zionists, said in Jerusalem that Mr. Ben-Gurion had "induced" Mr. Browdy to renounce the resolution, reports the New York Times.

Declaring himself "astounded" at this statement, Mr. Browdy asserted that it had "absolutely no grounds in fact" and that Mr. Ben-Gurion had never asked him "directly or indirectly" to renounce the resolution. Mr. Browdy explained that it was not the Prime Minister but "experience" that had induced him to believe that the Z. O. A. could prosper only if it stood above party without affiliation with any political group in Israel.

DUPUIS' NEW SYSTEM

Following its progressive Policy Dupuis has inaugurated some time ago a new selling method which makes for easier and quicker selection and brings important savings to the consumer.

Linoleum gives you scope. George made the colour sketch for this floor. It was laid by a contractor using two Marboleum patterns.

"Daddy had fun designing this floor!"

"Anyone can design a linoleum floor. I started it to amuse Joan. But George soon took over. When the design was finished, he got comparative prices and found that linoleum is the most economical floor you can buy — because it is as permanent as the walls of your home.

"He was fascinated — 65 lovely colours and styles to combine, using tiles and by-the-yard — Marboleum, Jaspé, Handicraft, Battleship plain.... Soon both of us were having a wonderful time planning floors for every room in the house.

"Now we're delighted with the result. So resilient to walk on, so thrilling a base for curtains, coverings, wall colours. And so easy to keep spotless! Just wonderful! My neighbours are absolutely green with envy."

If you are planning to build or renovate do as these people did. You may choose your own motif — like the fish design above — or select from the numerous attractive ready-made motifs carried in stock. Write for FREE linoleum booklet.
